

University of West Florida
College of Professional Studies
Division of Engineering and Computer Technology

Educational Leadership, M.Ed.

Throughout this program, students develop expertise in using emerging technologies to support teaching and learning, as they design and develop instruction, investigate how technology can be used to change institutions and organizations, and design and develop strategies to integrate technology into learning communities. Our graduates are employed in public and private schools (PK-12, community colleges, and universities) as teachers, technology coordinators, and district technology support personnel; in the military and business and industry as instructional designers and developers, and instructional project managers; and as distance learning professionals. This program is 100% online and includes the following:
